Tips

- Keep a folder for your birthday interview sheets, to ensure you don't lose them over time
- Start from as early an age possible (around 3y is a good time to start)
- Combine the interviews with other birthday traditions you may have
- Remember, if your child is overwhelmed on the actual day, doing the interview a few days before or after their birthday is absolutely fine. The more relaxed they are, the more fun you will have with this! (And they will look forward to it next year!)
- When your child gets to a certain age and you think you can't get any more birthday interviews out of them, consider creating a memory book with the interviews and some special birthday photos through the years.
